Page 1: Chapter 1: Variables and Data Types. A variable is a name that refers to a value stored in memory.

Page 2: Floating point numbers contain a decimal point and represent real numbers. Strings are sequences

Page 3: Boolean values represent truth values and can be either true or false. Type conversion allows you t

Page 4: Lists are mutable sequences. The append method adds an element to the end of a list. Indexing sta

Page 5: Dictionaries map keys to values using curly braces and colons. Dictionary keys must be hashable a